"You must know that a sad, dreamy-eyed type requires finesse and a resort to romantic methods to win. You don't know how to do it, that is all. Now watch me!"

This speech had been preceded by an ejaculation from the younger of the two men, sitting at an adjacent desk in the pleasant office.

Partners in a business that seemed to give them plenty of spare time for dallying even in business hours, their favorite "indoor sport" being mild flirtations with those females who had become wise as to the depth of their intention and consequently rather tame pastime, it was with strenuous efforts they tried to capture the attention of any stranger or newcomer to their floor.

Innocent, possibly in intent, but nevertheless trivial and somewhat cheap, so thought a recent arrival in the next room—a sad, dreamy-eyed, well-preserved woman of mature years, who had opened a millinery shop next door.

The younger man had tried every means to become acquainted, but beyond a cool smile, nod, or passing greeting, he had made absolutely no headway.

So the elder man took a hand in this flippant pastime of capturing a passing fancy, and he tried the romantic, mysterious way, that his superior (?) wisdom mapped out.

A rosebud through her letter slot greeted her in the morning; a blank card, sometimes. A box of flowers delivered late in the afternoon, from a mysterious source. He had the satisfaction of seeing his flowers in water in a place of honor; but he did not know that the woman had heard that that was a habitual custom of his to try to soften the heart of the fair sex with the touching presentation of a flower, and she had no delusions as from whence these sudden attentions proceeded.

So it was an inwardly-amused woman who set the flowers where he could see, but no hint of her amusement looked from her sad eyes as they casually met in the hall. Her bow and greeting were, if anything, cooler.

Then one day a tall, blond man, somewhat younger than the woman, came along the hall. His step was faltering and there was a strange, groping movement in his hands, yet he went straight to the door marked "Maison, Hutter," where a cry of rapture greeted him. The door was quickly closed and only a continuous joyous murmur could be heard.

The shop was closed for the remainder of the day, and together they were lost to sight.

Though silent, uncommunicative and aloof in the time of trouble, hiding, Spartan-like, her exquisite torture of uncertainty through a most grilling ordeal; in the glow of this most certain joy the woman expanded and had to give out of her happiness and relief from a corroding anxiety.

So the news spread like wildfire through the building, for human nature, prone to gossip, is the same in an office building as elsewhere.

"Yes, my baby brother; we are all that is left of the family; was in France," she told a neighbor. "Had suffered a peculiar affliction; was struck totally blind while in action. Nothing could be done to relieve him. He was examined by noted specialists who diagnosed the case as paralysis of the optic nerve resulting from shock."

"Sometime he might regain sight, but they held out no certainty of hope."

"Oh, yes, a remarkable cure. Through the treatment of a noted psychologist, Dr. — he had regained his sight, misty at first, but daily growing stronger."

On hearing this "the man next door," under his apparent lightness being a 100 per cent American, flushed a dark red from shame, but grew pale a moment after as a sudden realization that he loved this woman as a man loves only one woman in a lifetime, that his careless pursuit had led him into deep waters of emotion, and that his feeling now was akin to worship for this brave soul who so patiently had borne her sorrow in silence for so long.

Late in the afternoon next day he called at the latter's and pleaded his suit. She laughed at first. The sad, dreamy eyes were sad no longer, but dancing wells of joy. But as she saw the man's depth of emotion she grew serious.

"I am sorry; but you see next month I am going to marry the psychologist who restored my brother's sight!"

A Humorous Speculator.

A speculator on the stock exchange was sitting in a friend's office and during the conversation, which was mostly about stocks and bonds, he informed his friend that he had picked up a cheap thing during the winter.

"It stood at thirty-three then, and yesterday it touched eighty-four!" he said.

"By jove! You are lucky. What is it?" asked his friend.

"A thermometer," was the reply—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Studying Effect.

"Have you read the latest novel?" "No," answered Miss Cayenne. "Everybody is talking about it." "That is why I like to say I haven't read it. It makes me seem so unusual."

STATE OF MISSOURI, ss.
COUNTY OF IRON.
In the Circuit Court, in vacation, August 2, 1922.

Wm. H. Whitworth, executor under the last will and testament of William G. Whitworth, deceased, plaintiff, vs.

Annie L. Whitworth, Isabella Campbell and Edith May McMahon, defendants.

Now on this day comes the plaintiff before the undersigned, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Iron County, in vacation, and files his petition and affidavit, stating, among other things, that the above named defendants, Isabella Campbell and Edith May McMahon, are non-residents of the State of Missouri and cannot be served with the ordinary process of this Court within this State.

It is thereupon ordered by the undersigned, clerk aforesaid, in vacation, that publication be made notifying said defendants that an action has been commenced against them in the Circuit Court of Iron County, in the State of Missouri, for the purpose of construing the last will and testament of William G. Whitworth, deceased;

Which said action is returnable on the first day of the next regular term of this Court, to be held at the courthouse in the City of Ironton, in the County of Iron, in the State of Missouri, on the 2d day of October, 1922, at which time and place said defendants are required and commanded to be and appear and to plead, answer or demur to plaintiff's said petition, otherwise the allegations contained in said petition will be taken and considered upon the facts and proof offered by and upon behalf of the plaintiff, and judgment rendered accordingly.

It is further ordered that a copy hereof be published in the Iron County Register, a weekly newspaper, published in said County of Iron, for four weeks successively, the last insertion to be at least fifteen days before the commencement of the next term of said Court.

A true copy. Attest: J. M. HAWKINS, Circuit Clerk.

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her."

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since. I am sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too. At all druggists. E 85
